VI. An Extract of a Letter from Sir R. Bulkley concerning the Propagation of Elms by Seed.

THIS is to acquaint you that I have diſcourſed a poor meer Iriſh Labourer (who by having work'd many years under a Head Gardiner in a Gentleman's Garden, has got a Genius of Planting) who has follow'd the Propagating of Elms by the Seed (a way, if known, totally neglected among all Planters) which Seed he finds in the former part of the Year ; and he has rais'd in ſmall Beds ſuch vaſt numbers of them, that he ſells them of three or four Foot long at Two Shillings a Hundred, and will carry them any where within Five Miles, and plant them into the Bargain.

VII. An